

robin ascher

Robin studied ceramics in the mountains of Seto, Japan and then became a textile designer in London and New York. Pattern, texture and color combine to create her signature "Ascher look." The functional yet unusual pottery bowls, plates and vases are unique. Her vases and serving pieces are made from clay slabs impressed with her own unique linoleum carvings. Her work is inspired by the flora and fauna of the White Mountains of New Hampshire, where she resides and has her studio. Her work is varied in style and form and constantly evolving and changing.

"As my journey evolves, so do my unique pieces. Each kiln load brings forth something fresh for your collection. The warmth of artist-designed, handmade ceramics will enrich your life."
